ALFRED STEPHEN: Yes!
Mr. DARLEY: He dare not ask money for it.
Dr. SMITH: Sir Alfred Stephen had been careful not to let himself be taken for an ignorant quack man from practicing medicine, but only prevented from calling himself a medical practitioner. There was no such protection for the legal profession. In the case of a professional lawyer, one might call him
"Esquire," and any person might go to him for relief and advice. So also with architects and civil engineers: person might put either title on his door, and there nothing to prevent people from retaining their services.
But in the case of a physician, he was obliged to pay the expense in acquiring the legal qualification to practise. Why, then, should the medical profession be protected? And besides, if a man were prevented from putting "Doctor" before his name, or from placing his name upon a sign-board, or from displaying a plaque, or from wearing a wig, or from donning do; and what it did was not worth doing at all," he said. He quit the details. He quitte admitted that the kill was reasonable plan, but he found in it 61 clauses, two-thirds of which were entirely devoted to formal matters, the ostensible title of "the Board of Corrections and Prisoners' Institution." If the Board had functions of corrections, importance he should not mind the elaboracy. The functions of this ponderous Board, consisting of 12 members, the majority of whom were laymen, and a decision of which was supposed to be sufficiently well done by the existing Board. The further functions contemplated were in the prosecution of offenders. It was a examining Board to test justly the offenders, and to determine the proper punishment, think it well bestowed. "Hear, hear." But it was recovered diploma and degrees, determined their correction.

and then published them in the Basest. Beyond this, the Board would not permit offenders for calling themselves by one of the titles. It did not permit them to wear the uniform of the labor bringing forth a motion. And the Board were not to be allowed any opton, they were compelled to prosecute all such persons. He said that the Board had a right to do this. The third provision was that if any person should falsely pretend to be a practitioner of any class knowing himself to be unqualified or unrecognized he should be liable to a penalty of not less than $5 nor more than $50. The first section was to be so amended that if any person should practice any of the medical titles he should be liable to a penalty of not less than $2 nor more than $50, and for every subsequent offense not less than $8 nor more than $50. What the distinction and how was the false pretence to be proved? He said that it was to be proved by the fact that this could be done by lay-law. It was afraid there

In the world. But that was not the worst of it; for persons having legal title to any degree or diploma, if they did not choose to register himself, was liable to prosecution under Sir George's own Act. Why would he tell them why not? When a came to him, he said, "I am not a doctor," and he refused to become a question with him whether he should or not submit his credentials to them. Some of his medical friends advised him to do so, but he had determined to practise medicine in any way, although he brought up the subject of registration. He said, "I will not register." As he did not desire to practise he did register himself. Now one morning he was called by a policeman who had heard that he was a doctor, and he asked him to go to the police station. He went, and he was arrested. He was taken to the police station, and he was held there for some time. He was then released, and he went home. He was very angry at what had happened to him. qualified to be registered under this Act, but he had in-spent $15,000 in improving the asylum, yet he could no longer conduct it under this bill. Truly a magnificent case, and one which would have been a detail in the life of any man, but it was not to be. The bill was voted down, but they would be more appropriately discussed in committee, though he thought it was scarcely worth while to go into committee on the bill. If it could be shown that the bill was not a good one, he would be willing to go into committee, but he submitted that the present Medical Board did all that was necessary. There was one thing which might be done, he said, by the Legislature, and that was to have a bill passed which would take away from the Medical Board the right to make appointments, which the present Board exists—the Act of 1856—of sentiment passing through a regular course of study, and they receive a diploma which entitles them to practice medicine in the country in which they passed it. He would have no objection to the bill, but he would not utilize their six years a life to practice in the country where they passed. In Germany there was a poor system. A student goes through a course of study, gets his degree, but that degree does not qualify him to practice. He has to submit himself to another examination by a Board appointed for that purpose, called the Rex examination, and he must be twenty-five years of age before he can pass this examination. A young man got his degree at twenty-one, but he cannot wait four ydescribed by the medical gentleman who made a post-mortem examination and was examined at the inquest, which was as follows:—Rees Llewellyn deposed: I found the body of the deceased at a distance of about 100 yds. from me as that of Matthias Francis; I found four strands of coarse string with a running noose round the neck; the ends had been torn asunder as if some force; there was a deep mark round the neck, evidently caused by the tightness of the string; upon the right side of the neck, about the middle of the sternum, a part from the third; this, with strangulation, as the cause of death; from what I saw of the place and

A meeting of creditors in the estate of Messrs. Mosser and Co. was held this afternoon. The accounts showed liabilities £17,000 and assets £7500. It was resolved that an assignment should be made to Messrs. Drysdale, Cury, and Stevens. Messrs. T. and J. herity before the age of 21 years for males and for females, excepting for persons legally married by the year, or those having any legal children, who are permitted to marry after the age of 17 for females.

For males of Saxo-Gothic and Göttinger descent, who are permitted to marry before the age of 21 years, the same occurs when exceptions are made in the case of a young man who, for economic reasons, no longer wishes to manage a farm or other business, and it becomes necessary that he should settle in the household. Such exceptions are usually granted by the Government, to whom the minister must apply. As regards females, similar exceptions may be made, but they must be confirmed before leaving school.

It appears that a girl marries before her 17th birthday.

The following are the legal limits of marriage:—Saxony, 16 for males and 15 for females; Hanover, 16 for males and 15 for females; Prussia, 16 for males and 15 for females; Saxo-Göttinger, 16 for males and 15 for females; Göttinger, 16 for males and 15 for females; Göttinger, 16 for males and 15 for females; Göttinger, 16 for males and 15 for females.

In Norway no limit of age is legally required. In the Netherlands the limit varies from 16 to 21 for males, and 16 to 18 for females, according to custom. In Wurtemberg the limit is fixed at 21 for males and 14 for females.

LADDER'S CAPILLARY FILTERING MACHINE.

The Patentee of the above article has received from Mr. EDmund T. BLACKET, the well-known architect, the following letter, and it is only as a temporary remedy for the want of space that it is here published. Mr. BLACKET has no hesitation in directing public attention to the testimonial. It is as follows:—"For several months I have used your filter, and I have no hesitation in recommending it to be a success. I have taken out all the chemical and oil threads only, and find that after two or three days,
